History

In the long and storied history of the Stockyards and the city of Fort Worth, one simple truth is evident, the drovers and the Stockyards helped put this city on the map. Drovers roamed the Texas plains for decades, herding Texas longhorn cattle from the South and driving them North. Fort Worth served as one of the stops along the trail, providing a chance to rest at the Trinity River and bringing resources that fueled the economy and a pioneering spirit that fired the imagination. Harnessing the true spirit of the drover and all the narratives of the Chisholm Trail, Hotel Drover creates a new legacy for the Stockyards.

Design

Hotel Drover is an urban ranch oasis, embodying a hacienda modern rustic-luxe design throughout. Around every corner, the spirit of the West comes to life through touch points including the signature neon Cowboy installation by Austin's famed Evan Voyles, ancient fountains and water features curated from Europe, and John Lopez Studios' beautiful bronze and steel drover in the lobby. Global and local artists alike are showcased throughout public spaces and guest rooms, in addition to custom furnishings from Texas artisans including Hotel Drover-branded leather check-in booths, a two-story lobby library filled with Texas-inspired books, bespoke antler and handcrafted blackened steel chandeliers, and cowhide lounge chairs. The Backyard at Hotel

Drover is a sprawling outdoor retreat boasting a mix of towering mature oaks, cypress, maple, pines mixed with agave plants, and saguaro cacti, all complemented with string lights, custom Adirondack chairs, firepits and live music.
